'Twin Peaks' promises new mystery, and fresh coffee, as Showtime revival debuts

By Jay Bobbin
 © Zap2it

Very simply put, welcome back to "Twin Peaks."

The Pacific Northwest town known for slain beauty queens and mighty fine cups of Joe is open for business again, in television terms, after 26 years. Following some budget-related debate as to his involvement, series mentor David Lynch ultimately agreed to be all-in as director and (with fellow "Twin Peaks" creator and executive producer Mark Frost) co-writer of "Twin Peaks: The Return," Showtime's 18-part revival of the cult-classic mystery that begins Sunday, May 21.

Much of the principal cast of the original 1990-91 ABC show is back, too. Kyle MacLachlan returns as FBI agent Dale Cooper, with Sheryl Lee, Madchen Amick, James Marshall, Dana Ashbrook, Peggy Lipton, Wendy Robie, Ray Wise, Grace Zabriskie,

Russ Tamblyn, Richard Beymer, Kimmy Robertson, Everett McGill and David Duchovny; with several co-stars who passed away after filming their scenes — Miguel Ferrer, Warren Frost and "Log Lady" Catherine E. Coulson — also appearing again. (The most prominent absentee is sheriff Harry S. Truman's portrayal, Michael Ontkean, who retired from acting several years ago.)

Even composer Angelo Badalamenti is participating again, but for being an enduring phenomenon, the original "Twin Peaks" lasted only 30 episodes. "I see it as a film," the notoriously secretive Lynch says, of what viewers should expect from the new version made again in part in Washington State, "and a film in parts is what people (should) experience. It was a joyful, fantastic trip with this great crew and great cast. This word 'expect' is a magical word, and people expect things

... and their expectations are met, hopefully, when they see the thing."

Among the notable actors joining "Twin Peaks: The Return" are Lynch-movie veterans Laura Dern, Naomi Watts and Robert Forster as well as Ashley Judd, Tim Roth, Amanda Seyfried, Jim Belushi, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Matthew Lillard, Ernie Hudson, Monica Bellucci, Richard Chamberlain and music's Trent Reznor and Eddie Vedder. The casting also extends to such classic-TV faces as Lauren Tewes ("The Love Boat") and Grant Goodeve ("Eight Is Enough").

Though the actors are restricted from giving much detail — actually, make that "virtually any detail" — on the plot of the revisited "Twin Peaks" or the development of their characters, MacLachlan reflects on the unique place Lynch has had in his career (also encompassing "Blue Velvet," which starred Dern as well).

Joe Mantegna and company will keep pursuing ‘Criminal Minds’

BY JAY BOBBIN
© Zap2it

Q: Will ‘Criminal Minds’ be back next season? — Jeff Mitchell, Bryan, Ohio

A: It will. Though it hadn’t been on the initial list of shows CBS renewed for 2017-18, that had become a typical situation when it came to the Joe Mantegna-starring crime drama, for which negotiations are a little more complicated. For one thing, it’s co-produced by the studio arms of both ABC and CBS, so there’s a “dance” in terms of who foots which part of the bill ... and how the profits are shared, since “Criminal Minds” also has considerable international sales.

Then, there’s the matter of cast salaries that increase as the years go on. In a number of cases with the current stars, recent additions (and, with the departure of Thomas Gibson, one deletion) made that a slightly lesser issue this time, since Adam Rodriguez and Damon Gupton had signed up just last year and Aisha Tyler was given full co-star status then. In any event, the members of the BAU will continue to solve bizarre mysteries for at least another year, the show’s 13th.

Q: I enjoyed the recent birthday festival of Barbra Streisand films on Turner Classic Movies. Was “Funny Girl” her first film? — Janet Marsh, via e-mail

A: It was, though Columbia Pictures executives had wanted someone else for the film, since despite her stage success as central character Fanny Brice (and her growing fame from television specials she had done), she was untested on the movie screen. However, producer Ray Stark — who would work with Streisand a number of times — fought for her casting, to the extent that he wouldn’t let the music-infused play be filmed (he owned the screen rights) without her. Of course, the rest is history, with Streisand winning an Oscar at the 1969 ceremony for her movie debut and contributing the statue-acceptance line “Hello, gorgeous!” to Academy Award lore. Katharine Hepburn also won a best actress Oscar (her third of four) for that year, for “The Lion in Winter.”

Q: Though Michael Weatherly has left the show, will Robert Wagner keep returning to “NCIS”? — Tom Blake, Ormond Beach, Fla.

A: In all likelihood, since there’s been a big mutual admiration society between Wagner and the cast of the long-running CBS show from the first time he appeared on it. The burden is on the writers to find creative ways of bringing Wagner back as the father of Weatherly’s now-absent Tony DiNozzo, and they were successful in doing that a couple of times this past season, so there’s no reason to think that won’t continue.

Q: Where have I seen Caroline Dhavernas of “Mary Kills People” before? — Jane Darrow, Hope Mills, N.C.

A: The Montreal-born actress’ knack for appearing in offbeat projects — especially on television — also has seen her in major roles in Fox’s “Wonderfalls,” ABC’s “Off the Map” and NBC’s “Hannibal,” and she confirmed to us in a recent chat that she has a taste for doing things that haven’t been done before on the home screen. That certainly applies to her current Lifetime series as well.

Survivor

7 p.m. on KCTV

The “Game Changers” edition of the competition certainly has lived up to that title, with some developments making headlines – but the group of returning players knows every season of the game must end, as do the series’ fans, and the two-hour season finale arrives here. One of the remaining contestants will outwit, outplay and outlast the others and win the $1 million grand prize. Immediately afterward, Jeff Probst holds to tradition by hosting a reunion special.

Dirty Dancing

Co-stars include Debra Messing, Bruce Greenwood, Nicole Scherzinger and Billy Dee Williams.

Nature

A 2014 episode titled “The Gathering Swarms” may give immediate rise to thoughts of bees – and while those are among the creatures featured during the hour, they aren’t the only ones. Ants, cicadas, sardines, parakeets and penguins are among the others shown congregating in large groups, and for a variety of reasons. In each case, a major result is a collective way of thinking that surpasses what might be on the mind of any one of the participants.

NOVA

8 p.m., 1 a.m. on KCPT, KTWU

Various science-fiction movies have projected what might happen if a meteor collided with Earth, but this series’ episode “Meteor Strike” is the real deal. It recalls what happened when such an object – weighing 7,000 tons – struck Russia in 2013, with many dashboard cameras capturing the resulting destruction and chaos. Much of that footage informs the hour, as does the subsequent search by scientists for debris that may provide related information.

Food – Delicious Science

9 p.m., 2 a.m. on KCPT, KTWU

The second installment of the new three-part series describes its focus in the subtitle, “A Matter of Taste.” Hosts Michael Mosley and James Wong embark on an international tour to discover what makes food taste the way it does from a scientific standpoint, and what the effects of that quality are on the nose and tongue are. If a viewer were to wish that a television feature called Taste-O-Vision existed during this hour, that’s perfectly understandable.

Jon Benjamin) lies in a coma, Season 8 of this Emmy-winning adult comedy draws to a close with a finale called “Archer Dreamland: Auflosung,” which is German for “resolution.” The story sends gumshoe Archer to the Dreamland nightclub, where he receives a big break that could lead him to the murderer of Woodhouse.
